

Water/Utilities Report Oct. 20, 2014

Submitted by Joan Licari

The drought continues. For those of you that are contemplating redoing some aspects of your garden to make it more waterwise, the Fullerton Arboretum not far from Hacienda Height is having a California Native Plant Sale on November. 15th and 16th from 10:00 a.m. to 4 p.m. with a members advance sale on Friday. This is a way to see plants available. Two Hundred different types of plants will be for sale See more at:

http://www.fullertonarboretum.org/ps_CaliforniaNative.php#sthash.6wukWSJ3.dpuf

There will be seminars throughout the day on various topics. Some of these require prior registration. Not only is this a great place to buy your plants you can also visit the arboretum. And bring the family. There will be This time of year is the best time to plant these since they will have time for roots to develop through our wetter time of year and the extreme heat is thankfully pretty much over.

1900 Associated Rd, Fullerton, CA 92831 (657) 278-3407

Water saving and energy rebates are still available. Check waterwise.com.